GUEST SPEAKER

Stephanie McGraw

CEO of WARM (We All Really Matter)

Stephanie McGraw is the founder and CEO of WARM (We All Really Matter), a domestic violence organization she established in 2010 after surviving her own cycle of abuse. Driven to provide culturally competent, inclusive care, McGraw became the first Black woman to establish a domestic violence agency in Harlem. WARM is led by Black and brown survivors who use their lived experiences to provide comprehensive services to survivors from all backgrounds.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, McGraw created a critical response team and partnered with more than 20 NYPD commanding officers to help survivors facing imminent danger. From 2020–2022, WARM provided more than 520,000 meals, answered more than 9,350 hotline calls, and coordinated more than 200 emergency shelter placements. Its services have expanded to include grief counseling, PTSD and trauma workshops, economic empowerment initiatives, and their 12-week “Love Shouldn’t Hurt” training.

McGraw serves on the NYPD Domestic and Gender-Based Violence Training Committee and the Bronx Borough President’s Domestic Violence Advisory Council and is involved with the Upper Manhattan Collaborative Coalition. Her work has grown from serving survivors in Harlem to reaching communities throughout NYC and internationally.
